

News Release

The Interactive Media program prepares students for careers in the field of digital design. The students learn to select, create and manage various forms of media for the Internet and other interactive modes of visual communication.

The Interactive Media program provides an introduction to fundamentals skills, techniques and software used to create a variety of interactive components of multimedia. Juniors and seniors in this program are exposed to a broad range of web tools, web design applications, graphic editors, videography, editing, audio production, photography, animation and 3-D modeling tools. The coursework is project-based and the students have the opportunity to customize their learning experiences while developing team building, project management and work force skills.

The students produce monthly GHS and GPAT broadcast productions, "IMTV". All interactive media students participate in Business Professionals of America and compete in local contests, with the opportunity to advance to state and national level competitions.

Graduates of the Tech Prep Interactive Media program have the opportunity to earn college credit while in high school and scholarship eligibility opportunities with Sinclair Community College.

Recently, four junior interactive media students had the opportunity to attend a full day workshop at the International College of Broadcasting in Dayton, Ohio. Each student completed a training module in ICB's recording studio, radio and television station, and video and multimedia production lab. Brittany Bradburn, Morgan Carter, Cora Crowell, and Jake Synder returned to GHS with a complimentary USB drive containing their hands-on projects to share with their classmates.
